

Lucia Cooke
Allison Zimmerman
The Cooke Report

Why does the Cooke Report love lemurs and why do they love the DLC?

Lemurs are a fascinating species with links both to human history and current world challenges. Understanding these creatures on a biological scale provides researchers and scientists insights into a variety of fields, both related to and separate from their status as an endangered species. The DLC is proof that protecting Lemurs, educating the masses and scientific study are not mutually exclusive.

How did you discover the DLC?

I discovered the DLC when researching the Triangle area for "hidden gems" to include in the publication The Cooke Report. I admit, I did not expect to fall so deeply in love with these animals!

How long have you been supporting the DLC?

We have been supporters of for only about 2 years, but feel passionately about continuing. It is a wonderful asset to the local and global community.

Why is it important to you to support the DLC?

There are literally dozens of reasons to support the DLC, many I have already mentioned. The best question is, why wouldn't you!

Favorite species of lemur

Please don't make me pick one. Each species has a story and social connections that are amazing to witness first hand. (Editor's note: The Cooke Report has sponsored signage for the Blue-eyed black lemurs..... they must be the favorite!)
